The Bad Plus Joshua Redman

Friday, April 28, 2017

7:30 p.m.

Lawlor Events Center

TICKETS

The Bad Plus — bassist Reid Anderson, pianist Ethan Iverson, and drummer David King — have a well-earned reputation for pushing the limits on what is expected of a piano-bass-drums trio. For almost two decades, the genre-smashing band has created an original repertoire of inventive music, along with iconoclastic covers of artists as divergent as Nirvana, Neil Young, Aphex Twin and Ornette Coleman.

For its appearance at the 2017 Reno Jazz Festival, the New York-based trio is joined by saxophonist Joshua Redman. It's a collaboration that began in 2011 with a handful of performances before they went into the studio to record The Bad Plus Joshua Redman, which was released in 2015.

The merger was a successful one.

“The newly christened Bad Plus Joshua Redman took the stage ... and proceeded to raise the roof,” according to a review in Metroland of Albany, N.Y. “In a word, the music the quartet produces is sublime. More than that, it's as though Redman is the long-lost fourth member of the group, just waiting to be snapped snugly into place.”

The Bad Plus almost has exclusively performed as a trio. Occasionally, guests join the band in concert, but only one of its previous 10 albums has included a fourth member. Redman, however, has long enjoyed mixing his musical partners. He has collaborated with Brian Blade, Christian McBride, Brad Mehldau and Pat Metheny, as well as with the SFJAZZ Collective and his bandmates in James Farm.

“On the live gigs, Josh plays magnificent, long tenor solos which are very much in the jazz tradition,” Iverson said. “That’s obviously not the focus when we play as The Bad Plus. It’s fun for us to enjoy that extended blowing territory, especially with someone as great as Josh. On the album, however, there is still a focus on composition.”

Redman told the Minneapolis’ Star Tribune, “Playing with the Bad Plus has allowed me to explore a part of my playing, and my musical heritage, that I’ve never before accessed in quite the same way with any other group. The adventure with The Bad Plus pushes me toward the fringes and draws me into the core.”

The Bad Plus’ latest albums carry on the trio’s commitment to what members have dubbed “avant-garde populism” — the idea serious music can be as engaging and accessible as it is forward-thinking and provocative.

King said The Bad Plus is a “mixed media band at heart.” “We have conversations which are so stimulating as if we’re in an art salon. I’ve never experienced that in other bands. In The Bad Plus, we’ll talk about a conductor or symphony for hours and then switch over to muscle car films from the 60s. In our music, we believe high and low can be mixed together without seeming precious,” he said.

The Bad Plus Joshua Redman concert is included in the Jazz Fan, Full Festival and Friday passes. Visit our Purchase page for options in buying individual concert tickets and for more information.
